~SECSOMNIA~

Everyone knows about sleeping people who get up and go for a walk, but far less is heard about the rare cases of men who try to have sex in their sleep. One found himself in serious trouble, reports the BBC's Sally Abrahams.

When Sarah first met Tom at a friend's house, they 【1】 clicked. He was warm, chatty, with a gentle sense of humour that reminded her of her brother.

【2】 the following weeks, they went on dates and spent more time together. Sometimes Sarah would stay over at Tom's flat. At other times, he would come to hers. As they were getting to know each other, something happened while they were in bed one night that made Sarah feel 【3】 .

Tom began fondling her breasts, then quickly began thrusting at her groin in a crude, unsensual kind of way. It was early days in their relationship, and she decided not to say 【4】 about it. "I guess I thought he was just being a bit frisky, so I just brushed it off. Which is probably what always happened in the past."

Gradually, they became closer, and settled into a routine of meals out, cinema and long walks together. They enjoyed each other's company and Sarah put aside her worries of that strange nocturnal episode.

Sarah didn't know what to think. Tom's crude attempt to have sex that night had been totally 【6】 how he normally was; gentle, intimate, sensual. But she remembered something Tom had told her when they first met, before the relationship had even begun that years ago, he had been 【7】 raping his ex-partner, karen, and 【8】 to seven years in jail.

But one night, afer they'd been to a party, where they'd both been drinking, Sarah woke from a deep sleep to find Tom trying to penetrate her through her underwear.

It was painful and 【5】 . The next day, she told him she'd had enough and wanted to end the relationship. But Tom's response surprised her. "He didn't know what I was talking about so he was quite defensive. And I was really angry habing been woken up and him just completely oblivious to the whole thing," Sarah says.

Tom insisted he had no recollection at all of trying to have sex with Sarah that night. He was devastated by her account of what he had done and by the thought that he had hurt her.
